

THE CENTER FOR PROFESSIONAL STUDIES

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: August 20, 2012

Approved Vendor for Automation Alley

The Center for Professional Studies (CPS) has just been approved as a vendor to Automation Alley for their Talent Development Program. CPS's courses in Program Management are now approved and available through this important program to service our business community with hands-on based certificate technical training.

Based on CPS's unique tools, techniques and methodologies that apply theory to real company sponsored projects in the classroom. CPS's vast experience in the corporate world brings a unique perspective to the classroom and training event. CPS believes there must be a measurable outcome from a training event that proves the time and resources provided value.

CPS has prepared a White Paper about their approach and stellar accomplishments serving these types of students and believes this should be the model of training for both the public and corporate sector. CPS would be happy to share this document with anyone who is interested.

About CPS

Founded in 1993 The Center for Professional Studies (CPS) has trained over 7,000 Technical Professionals at 400 corporations. CPS is a Michigan based licensed vocational training institute that provides world class certified technical education. Their courses are constantly being updated to keep pace with the ever changing trends which are monitored by a multi-industry represented curriculum board. CPS's methodology is a fast paced, hands-on approach which covers theory, industry application, then demonstrates them on real life projects.
